A DEATH BLOW

Was Given to Goebelism
at the Lexington Convention.

The Following Are Extracts
From Brown's Speech.

Gov. Brown spoke as follows:

"My Fellow-Democrats: I am going onward, nearing the sunset of life. The shadows are lengthening behind me. But standing before you now, in my native State, I feel now that it is the proudest hour of my life. (Applause) Heretofore I have gone before you with an undivided Democracy behind me, with the united strength of my party sustaining me, with the supremacy of the flag that I wore, there was none of the family to dispute; but to-day, under exceptional conditions, I come now as a candidate, and I accept your nomination with gratitude and with pride. (Applause.)

"I come, I say, bearing your commission, which is disputed by a faction of our party. I am a Democrat of Democrats. (Applause) For more than forty years, without faltering, I have voted the Democratic ticket, never having scratched one in my life; and to-night, when I have nearly reached the allotted span of human life, three score and ten, I find myself prompted by my conscience, by the respect I have for Kentucky and the dignity of Kentucky and American citizenship, to say to you that I refuse to support the nominations made by the so-called late Democratic convention at Louisville. (Applause.)

"I understand that it is the sentiment of this convention to give me, as my comrade in this fight, that untried gentleman, who is a citizen of Fayette county, Philip P. Johnson. (Applause) With an unchallenged record as a soldier, with an undoubted character as a gentleman, I take of my hat to him in this contest, and salute him as one of Kentucky Bayards, without fear and without reproach.

"Boalers, do you call us? We two old men, have fought in the front ranks of Democratic battles! Boalers, do you call us? Is there a man in Kentucky animated by a sentiment of honesty and truth, who would say his heart or my heart was influenced by selfish ambition in assuming the places that we will be called upon to take not at all; not at all. It is to sustain your constitution; it is to sustain the dignity of Kentucky citizenship it is for the vindication of freedom of elections (applause), guaranteed by our constitution, that we are here, and we are your nominees, not by any written bargain. (Applause) Not by any combination. But as the spontaneous gift and commission of the true Democracy of Kentucky. (Applause).

"It is said that Bryan is coming to Kentucky to tell the Democrats of the State to vote for Mr. Goebel. When he comes I intend to see that the question is put to Mr. Bryan, as I have stated in my remarks here, if such be the undisputed history of that convention as to a bargain and as the rulings of the Chairman, you will stand up before Kentuckians and say that that makes a good title to the nomination? He won't say it. (Cries of no, no.)

"I speak history and speak it not in vanity, but in self-defense. There is my record. There is my record that the malice of men cannot destroy. There is my record that the demagogue cannot disguise. (Applause.) There is my record before my fellow-citizens, and whenever read these accusations against me, or hear these damnable suspicions, remember they are made by cowards—I speak, perhaps, most too strongly, because I do not want to be offensive to anybody—but whenever you hear them, allow me to say, if you please, in self-defense, you tell them: 'There is Brown's record; where is yours? (At this point there was a great demonstration of applause.)

"Has manhood fled to brutish beasts? Has all that has been said of the heroism of our State been a fable?

"No, thank heaven, no! The answer is in the audience here before me to night. There never assembled in Kentucky from the days of Daniel Boone until this evening an assemblage of thousands of more intelligent men, of more manhood, of more influence, of more Christian dignity and decency than the people whom I see before me to-night. You are not disappointed office-seekers. You are not deadbeats. You are not fools.

"Gentlemen, before you I point you to the stars upon your flag and its stripes. I point you to the past of our glorious State. I turn you to the graves of your fathers. I ask you to look into the eyes of your children. I ask you to look into the mirror and behold yourselves. Are you ready to bow down in abject submission?

(Cries of 'No! No! Never!')

"To surrender your birthright under the name of party regularly, Party regularly! It means fraud; it means despotism; it means coalition of the political and judge to hoodwink by the legerdemain of the political magicians the honored and honest yeomanry of this Commonwealth, and I feel from this meeting to night that you are coming; coming, Father Abraham, a hundred, strong. Go home and tell your neighbors whom you met here. Tell your neighbors what you heard here. Seek the facts, seek the truth, and all I ask of my fellow citizens is for a man not to surrender to his fears from selfish apprehension, but to obey the honest dictates of his conscience, and it is the honest vote of the honest man who leaves. They were in the Revolutionary War. They were upon one side or the other as heroes in the late civil struggle. What takes the Anglo-Saxon to battle? Invades his home, deny him his rights, put humiliation upon him, and though it may leave his children in beggary to take up the cause of self-defense, rather would be leave them in beggary to leave them dishonored and as slaves.

"You saw this little up start Judge Redwine. The Bible says, look not upon the wine when it is red, but he looked upon this wine that was red. He sat there as a Kentucky Caesar, ruling by his usurpation, by his arbitrary decisions, sons of the sires of 1776, and degrading in the very dust the manhood of Kentucky. Why they did not rebel then and there I don't understand. My God! I believe if the womanhood of Kentucky had been there and understood their rights, there would have been a row. (Laughter.)

"Now, I say that the nomination of Mr. Goebel was fraudulent. I wish to say, furthermore, there were 1,092 members of that convention, 323 seats contested, leaving over 700 men there sitting whose title was uncontested. Goebel and his ticket were fraudulently nominated by reason, in my opinion, of what I have stated, because the members of that ticket were accessories before and after the fact in the consummation of this scheme; but if Gen. P. Wat Hardin had been nominated—and he came within thirty-one votes of the nomination—his title would have been as clear as a star. (Applause.) Mr. Hardin received a majority of the uncontested votes of that convention, and Mr. Hardin was untried by any garbals, written or verbal.

"I want to give you facts tonight. I am a Democrat. You don't see a changed man before you. You don't see a man with a new castchism of political facts. You don't see a man who has changed his coat. I am here, as I said before, from a high sense of duty. I love my State, and I will save it, if I can, from the impending degradation that it is proposed to be put upon her.

"It is said that Bryan is coming to Kentucky to tell the Democrats of the State to vote for Mr. Goebel. THERE are only two men in Daviess county for Goebel and his ticket, "Hooley" Woodson and Capt. W. T. Ellis. The author of this statement is a Democrat of the old school, but not a "Last Day Saint." Should this be questioned, the evidence in the case can be had by calling at this office.

THE PRESENT CRISIS.

The republic of Peru has adopted the gold standard. Up until recently Peru has had free silver, but experience has taught that country a lesson that we are striving to evade, and for the present, we are entirely out of danger. Bryan has ordered imperialism to the front rank and free silver to fall back to second place for reinforcement.

JO BLACKBURN said in a recent speech "I will bet my soul's salvation against a counterfeit coin, that the Republicans if given the power would not repeal the Goebel election law." If the Goebel election law really insures fair elections Mr. Blackburn pays the Republicans a great compliment when he says they will not repeal a law which he claims was passed to keep them from stealing the State, but in point of fact, Blackburn meant to tell his audience that the Republicans would utilize the Goebel election law to steal elections with Goebel ought to muzzle the windy ex-Senator.

The open violation of the Prohibition law in Ohio county is potent to everyone who has given the matter any attention, and is a question that should be given immediate consideration by the good citizens of the county. While whisky was sold legally in the town of Hartford, the REPUBLICAN has not thought it expedient to urge the people to suppress the sale of it in the smaller towns, but on the 31st of this month the legal sale of whisky will close in Hartford and Ohio county will again be a prohibition county, and if the good citizens of the county really desire to see the sale of whisky suppressed, this paper can be depended upon to assist any wisely directed effort to suppress it. The REPUBLICAN will undertake no ill-timed crusade against the "blind tigers," but if there is a healthy public sentiment against the sale of intoxicants in the county, we will give whatever assistance we can to encourage it. The prohibition law should be enforced or repealed, there is no tenable middle ground. We wait the action of the good citizens of Ohio county in regard to the matter.

A FALSE CHARGE.

The eyes of the nation are upon the political contest now on in Kentucky by reason of the unusual character of the question at issue. Those issues upon which political contests are usually fought are at present completely overshadowed by a popular demand for honest conventions and fair elections, growing out of the passage of the Goebel election law and the outrageous Music Hall conventions and honest elections are the ground work of Republican institutions, and without which no question of public interest can be rightly settled and to preserve these fifty thousand and honest Kentucky Democrats, who hope for no reward, save the consciousness of duty done, have repudiated the Goebel oligarchy and will sustain their country's right against their party's wrong. Those Democrats who have dared to desert the Music Hall convention rather than condone its infamy, will do more than rescue Kentucky from a dangerous band of political highwaymen; their example will warn the political buccaneers of other states that vice and crime in politics must expect to meet a stubborn opposition at the hands of an outraged people. The defeat of Goebel by an overwhelming majority would mark the beginning of an era of purer politics in Kentucky and its influence for good would be felt throughout the country.

The Philippine question is an aggravating and trifling affair that has caused the administration a great deal of trouble and unrest. The insurrection has continued several months, but should be brought to a speedy close. There are two plausible reasons for having continued and prolonged this contest, the first reason was a failure to comprehend the strength of the Insurgents; and the second was fighting in an entirely strange country. It appears that Gen. Otis has not exercised the best strategy in his operations. It is certain that he failed to trap Aguinaldo as was frequently reported he would do at the next move of his forces. Nothing is more clear to the administration than a necessity for a larger army. To this end Secretary Root has determined to raise the number of men in actual service to 60,000. The action of the new secretary is meeting the approval of the press and country generally. The plans for the campaign to be opened as soon as the dry season comes will be aggressive and not defensive alone. In six weeks after the opening of the campaign Aguinaldo and his army should be prisoners of war and peace restored in Luzon at least. There have been a few daring exploits by some of the officials and men, but not in a single instance, to our knowledge, has the enemy been entrapped. When the fresh forces reach Manila, we may expect a more vigorous campaign and a speedy conclusion of the disputed right of the United States to its acquired territory.

A BIT OF REASONING.

Some time ago, about a score of sturdy farmers met at a neighbor's to assist in the prosecution of some work which neighbors usually befriend each other in, and while resting they ventured to exchange their opinions of the present campaign, as usual. The crowd was composed of Republicans and Democrats in good standing and a few Populistic Bryanites and Goebel-taught Democrats. A Republican opened the conversation by asking an ex-Confederate soldier, what in his opinion would be the result of the present campaign. His response was in favor of the Goebel ticket, as expected, but the Republican took issue with the aged farmer and presumed to defend his stand. At this juncture a thoroughly Goebelized Populist interrupted the conversation with these words: "The Republicans won't get there if they should get a majority of the votes, for Goebel will count them out." The ex-Confederate interposed with this in retort: "Neighbor, do you believe that Goebel will attempt such a thing?" The neighbor's reply was: "I know it." In spite of this fact he declared that he would support Goebel first, last and all the time.

In the absence of enlightenment and civilization, in the absence of common sense and reason, in the absence of truth and Christianity alone, can man make use of such language. We find no fault with any man for differing from us upon questions of importance, provided some logical reason can be offered for his position. But when a man frankly admits the prevalence of fraud, force and corruption and openly declares that he endorses and will support that state of affairs, we set the seal of ignorance, superstition and folly upon him. An intelligent man will make no such rash statements, no Christian gentleman can afford to lead such a course and no man of principle will allow party prejudice to become so wedged into his mind that he will even entertain such an idea. However it has been our displeasure to learn that many others have made use of the same assertion. For those who so desire to speak, we entertain the kindest respect and insist that the word of the Master be placed upon the stand table for their benefit, and also that the clergy be sent to expound the truth to the lost.

OUR PURPOSE.

It is our purpose to give to our many readers the best material at command and to this end our efforts are directed. Our purpose is not a public quarrel with any, but upon the contrary, peace and good will to all. However, we sought in our last issue to draw our neighbor and contemporary, the Herald, into a fair and honest discussion of a question of paramount importance to the readers of both journals, but in vain. A comparison of the Ohio Election Law, of which our esteemed friend had occasion to boast in the recent past, with the Goebel Election Law would be material, such that would interest every man in Kentucky. In view of this fact, and in view of the fact also that the Herald, in order to fortify and prepare itself for any emergency, did send to the State of Ohio and procure a copy of the election laws of that State, we laid a challenge before the door of the Herald to give its readers the benefit of its research. This was a fair proposition, a proposition at which no man could take offense, but the Herald as usual, when it gets into deep water, "poosened, swooned, sullen and fainted." It acknowledges its inability to cope with the existing facts by its silence. The Herald should venture not upon questions so far beyond the reach of its mental caliber. It is before the public and does it dare defend its political corruption? Does it dare defend the interior hypocrisy, assume to say it is What Christian denominations oppose the election of the Goebel ticket? Since the Baptist Associations have commenced to rebuke the entire Goebelized ticket by passing resolutions denouncing the manner and procedure in the Louisville convention, some "jacklegs" who claim to be Christians, but on their faces is written hypocrisy, assume to say it is

GREETED BY 6000 AUDITORS

Gen. Taylor Handled the Goebel Bill Without Gloves In His London Speech.

Sketches From His Speech are here Given.

THE GOEBEL LAW.

But the crowning act of infamy perpetrated by this "vicious body of deformed Democrats and degenerate Americans" was the enactment of the Goebel election law. In the language uttered February 26, 1898, by the newspaper which is now the chief organ of the Music Hall convention tick et:

"The people may well stand aghast before the revolutionary election bill which has, like some dread monster, suddenly emerged from the fastnesses of passion and error through which the Legislature has been threading its tortuous way. It is safe to say that the annals of free government will be sought in vain for anything approaching it in shameless effrontery and unconcealed deformity."

"This force bill gives the voters of Kentucky not a ray of hope. It makes no claim or show of fairness. It places exclusive in the hands of three irresponsible persons to be named by the authors of the measure itself the entire electoral machinery of the State. That is the whole of it. In one word, and at one fell swoop, Kentucky is to become the subject of a Triumvirate, which is to decide who shall hold office and who shall not. Nominally, the people are to be permitted still to go through the form of elections. They are to be permitted still to vote. The ballot box is not actually abolished. But the Triumvirate is in each and every case to cast up the returns and determine the result."

"My friends, the measure has been publicly and privately discussed and commented upon in the press; you have seen it in operation, and are more or less familiar with its provisions. But it cannot be discussed too often, nor at too great length. If you will bear with me I will speak briefly of those features which render it particularly odious and an absolute menace to your most sacred rights."

"It creates a State Election Commission composed of three men to be elected by the Legislature. There is no provision for a division of these commissioners among the political parties. This board not only appoints and removes county boards at pleasure, but sits as a court of contest."

"No provision is made for a division of the members of the county boards between the parties. The people are not to be consulted as to who shall hold those county offices. The State Board can arbitrarily act upon all questions and its decisions are final. It can remove county boards without cause, and there is no redress. The county board appoints the officers of elections, and while they are required by the new, as in the old, law, to divide the election officers between the parties, they are left at liberty to determine for themselves who are Republicans and who are Democrats. If the county board is Democratic, it has the power under the law to select as Republican election officers any man whom the members of that board are pleased to call Republicans, no matter if they be openly defying their party organization, nor its candidates could prevent the perpetration of this outrage. Incompetent and unreliable Republicans can be appointed in every precinct. The Sheriff, who is the umpire between two judges (the clerk having no voice), may in every voting precinct be a Democrat, or belong to the party having control of the election machinery. The county board may without cause, at any time, remove any election officer, even on a mere technicality. And I am told that such a thing did occur in Kenton county at the last election."

"Inquiries of the law.

"When a law fails to provide against inequalities and wrong, it is equivalent to a direction to do wrong. To make possible is to license. To place the power to oppress in the hands of any particular class of men is an absolute guarantee that wrong and oppression will follow. Under this law the Legislature may create a State machine; this machine may in turn create a county machine; the county machine may create a precinct machine, which may, with impunity rape the ballot-box and overthrow the will of the people. The possibilities for evil of this law have been illustrated in its practical operations."

"The Legislature of 1898 was overwhelmingly Democratic. It elected three State Commissioners, everyone of whom was and is now a Democrat, and a personal partisan of the author of the measure. Thus in its very incipiency we find a perversion of justice and equality. Where is ever a semblance of justice in the act placing in the hands of the partisan friends of one party and one man the supreme control of the election machinery of the entire State? This board thus deliberately packed, first selected a secretary belonging to the same party, and the devoted adherent of the same man. It then proceeded to create 119 county boards, and without a single exception packed these boards with a partisan majority, adhering to the same party as the State board. In many counties every member of the board belongs to one party."

"It further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the wife of our deceased brother," also that a copy be sent to the Masonic Home Journal, Hartford Herald and Hartford Republican for publication.

Men do not like to go to doctors. Nine times out of ten they wait until they are laid flat on their backs before they will consult a physician. There is some reason in this, for when a business man feels out of sorts with general aches and pains, he often takes some drugged tea, that makes him, for a time, unfit for business and really sick.

There is a way of avoiding both extremes—that of neglecting the health and that of taking violent doses of medicine. The system is always to keep on hand a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

There is another matter that the people ought to know. Four years ago the former administration, for the purpose of deceiving the people, during the campaign of that year, overestimated the amount of money due the teachers for 1895 to the extent of $114,612.97, and declared the per capita to be $2.87. Under the law the present administration was compelled to deduct from the school fund due the teachers for 1896 the tremendous sum. The cruel injustice practiced on the teachers of 1895 for political ends is perfectly apparent. This is a sample of the methods resorted to by informers years to deceive

We received the sad news Wednesday from Leitchfield of the death of little Lubbie Rowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Rose, Hartford. Little Lubbie was born May 5th, 1898, at Hartford and died in Leitchfield, Aug 23d, 1899. The fifteen months and eighteen days of her earthly abode were, for the most part, attended with ill health, nevertheless she was the joy, the comfort and the blessing of a happy home. Realizing the condition of the child's health, and desiring to be with their parents, the grief stricken parents removed the child to Leitchfield about two weeks ago where she remained in care of Dr. Conklin until her death. BISHOP-HOCKER.

Yesterday evening in the city of Louisville, Lieutenant Oscar Bishop and Miss Mabel Hocker, both of Hartford, were quietly married. It is presumed that the young people went to the city for the novelty of the affair and not because of any objections, for it was a mutual union. Lieutenant Bishop has been a citizen of Hartford for sometime, where, by his manly and courteous manner he has made many friends. As Deputy County Clerk under Mr. D. M. Hocker, he was kind and obliging to the people, faithful and untiring in the performance of his official duties.

When hostilities broke out between the United States and Spain, he offered his service to his country and was made First Lieutenant Company D 3d, Ky., Volunteers. He performed his duties as a soldier and officer faithfully and fearlessly, winning for himself the friendship and love of his fellow soldiers and the respect of his officers. Since his efficiency and worth as an officer have been recognized by the higher officials he has received an appointment as First Lieutenant in the 47th U. S. V. Army and will soon quit his native land to do battle in the Philippines.

Miss Hocker is one of Hartford's most esteemed and winsome young ladies and well merited, the man of her choice. The bride was accompanied to the city by her father, Mr. D. M. Hocker, Wednesday evening. The groom in company with Mr. Jas. Sanjour left Hartford yesterday morning destined for the same place. The bridal party will return to-day at noon.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 25

When Words Failed.

Side by side in the moon's pale light Two figures sat in the early night. One was a man who was half afraid, The other a timid, shrinking maid. A friendly cloud came over the sky, And the man grew bold as it caught his eye.

He reached an arm and he turned his face, And kissed that maid in the proper place.

And all was silent except for this: The lonely echo of that one kiss.

She may have blushed or she may have not;

She silently sat in that self made spot

While the man no syllable spoke aloud,

But waited and gathched for another cloud.

The cloud soon came, and another, too.

And he did what any man would do

And still that maiden, who scarcely stirred,

Just sat and uttered no single word.

Until, as he gave her one on the cheek,

He cried, "Oh, tell me, why don't you speak?"

And the maiden said, with impatient sight,

"Not now; let's wait till the clouds roll by!"—Tom Mason, in Life.

The Menace of Goebel and Mr. Bryan's Mistake.

When Mr. Bryan reaches Kentucky to speak for Mr. Goebel he will find a very curious state of affairs. His object will be to unite the Democracy in the interests of the Chicago platform but he will find that the division existing is not over the Chicago platform. The Democrats who are resisting Mr. Goebel are silver men, and ex Governors or Brown, who has consented to lead them, has always been a silver man. Mr. Goebel, on the other hand, is a recent convert from the gold cause, and none so sincere, as his opponents believe.

Mr. Bryan expresses solicitude for the safety of Mr. Blackburn. But Mr. Blackburn is in no danger except from his alliance with Mr. Goebel. He is the most popular man in the State, and no effort was necessary to secure his endorsement of him by senator by the Democratic convention. Some of his friends are grieved at his present attitude, and are of the opinion that he is unable to trust Mr. Goebel.

Silver is not the trouble there. The Democracy is divided over the manner of Mr. Goebel's nomination and over the election law which bears his name. His nomination, his opponents declare, was secured by force and fraud. Many of his supporters, even, do not dispute the charge. Mr. Watterson simply insists that Mr. Goebel played the same game in the convention that his rivals were trying to play, and was the "smarter" of the three. And as to the Goebel election law Mr. Watterson has declared:

"It is safe to say that the annals of free government will be sought in vain for anything approaching it in shameless effrontery or unconcealed deformity. The records of reconstructive efforts to furnish nothing to compare with it. The Brownlow despotism in Tennessee was considered tolerably reckless and tolerably thorough in its day, but the Brownlow despotism at its worst ventured upon nothing so boldly, wholly as this."

So that in speaking of Mr. Goebel Mr. Bryan must practically indorse both the manner of the former's nomination and the election bill. Is he prepared to do that? He can not, like Mr. Watterson, indorse Mr. Goebel and repudiate all of his works. Mr. Watterson is at home and takes liberties with his own vine and fig tree. Besides, he is hard pressed in this race, and has been absolved from giving reasons for anything. But Mr. Bryan, as a visitor, must, if possible, be logical. Can he, whose own methods have so far been above question, afford to indorse those of a sort so radically different?

But the strangest feature of all will be the appearance of Mr. Bryan and Mr. Watterson on the same side. They ought to stump the State together. They would undoubtedly prove a great drawing card, although the crowds might be more amused than convinced by the combination. Mr. Watterson, while glad to hear that Mr. Bryan is coming to Mr. Goebel's aid is still against Mr. Bryan. He calls for Mr. Goebel's election in one column and for a new leader and a new platform for the national Democracy in the other. But this, of course, would not prevent him from giving the Nebraskan a cordial welcome to the State and helping him "whoop up the boys." The Kentucky people have a keen sense of humor, and a Bryan and Watterson special, rolling over the State, would distribute a good deal of hilarity.—Washington Post.

The revolt is not confined to any particular faction. It includes many of the ablest and truest Democrats in Kentucky. They believe that Goebel secured his nomination by unscrupulous methods. He is the author of an election law passed by the last legislature which puts the naming of the election officers in every precinct and the counting of the votes in the hands of a partisan commission controlled by him. This commission has the power to issue certificates of election, and from its decision no appeal can be taken, even to the courts.

There are other reasons for the bitterness against Goebel. He shot and killed Banker John Sanford of Covington, an ex confederate soldier, after provoking an attack by a scandalous newspaper assault on Sanford which is alleged Goebel inspired, if he did not write. The former candidate of the dead banker, who include thousands of the leading Democrats, will refuse to support Goebel.

Outside of Goebel the nominations for the other State offices are excellent. Under ordinary conditions the ticket would win easily. It is peculiarly unfortunate that ambition of an unworthy, scheming politician should threaten disaster to the Kentucky Democracy in the year preceding a presidential contest.—New York Journal.

It begins to dawn upon us, and doubtless upon a great many of his followers and disciples—for good taste knows no divisions of politics or geography—that Hon. William J. Bryan is putting needless strain upon the devotion and respect of the Democratic party at large.

Of course the Post has always advocated a government by party as the only system possible under our institutions, and has insisted that the rule of the majority applies as absolutely to the smallest subdivision of State or county as to the country at large. From this point of view we have defended every party leader on the list—Gorman, Quay, Hoar, even Lodge—as entitled to the supremacy he may have won within the strict lines of party discipline. When the Cleveland worshipers in 1896 bolted the Chicago ticket and set themselves up as superior beings we treated them, from Cleveland himself down to Bynum and Bourke Cochran, as many renegades and humbugs disguised as prigs. We speak for no political organization. Our chosen part is to take administrations as they come, and treat them by the standard of their public usefulness. Hence when we say that Mr. Bryan is blundering sadly we speak for no party or faction, but in the interest of truth and common sense.

Mr. Bryan blunders in going to Kentucky to take part in a purely in testinal quarrel among Democrats. The people who oppose Goebel are not Bryan's doubtful supporters. On the contrary, Goebel's most conspicuous advocates are Democrats of the Henry Watterson type—men who, in 1896, damned Bryan with faint praise if not with open enmity. Certainly Watterson himself was prominent in the ranks of Democratic election. He bubbled over with somewhat tawdry epigrams and aphorisms, and, toward the last, became practically choked with maudlin sentiment. He addressed the American Democracy from the summit of Mont Blanc, and contributed to the mountain streams of Switzerland the freshets of his tears. There is no reason why Bryan should descend from the eminence he occupies and mingle with the warring factions Kentucky. Even though there were an excuse for his intervention at all, he should be on the side of those who fought and voted for him three years ago. But there is no excuse of any kind. The Democrats of Kentucky are the men to say whether Goebel represents the majority in the party and they have not so far made their convictions clear.

Mr. Bryan is imperiling his leadership by such questionable offices. He should bear in mind the fact that no party leader can secure the loss of his party's respect and confidence.—Washington Post.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 25

When Words Failed.

Side by side in the moon's pale flight
Two figures sat in the early night.
One was a man who was half afraid,
The other a timid, shrinking maid.

A friendly cloud came over the sky,
And the man grew bold as it caught his eye.

He reached an arm and he turned his face.

And kissed that maid in the proper place.

And all was silent except for this:

The lonely echo of that one kiss.

She may have blushed or she may have not;

She silently sat in that self made spot.

While the man no syllable spoke aloud,

But waited and gathched for another cloud.

The cloud soon came, and another,
too.

And he did what any man would do

And still that maiden, who scarcely stirred,

Just sat and uttered no single word.

It begins to dawn upon us, and doubtless upon a great many of his followers and disciples—for good taste knows no divisions of politics or geography—that Hon. William J. Bryan is putting needless strain upon the devotion and respect of the Democratic party at large.

Of course the Post has always advocated a government by party as the only system possible under our institutions, and has insisted that the rule of the majority applies as absolutely to the smallest subdivision of State or country as to the country at large.

From this point of view we have defended every party leader on the list.

Gorman, Quay, Hoar, even Lodge as entitled to the supremacy he may have won within the strict lines of party discipline. When the Cleveland worshippers in 1896 bolted the Chicago ticket and set themselves up as superior beings we treated them, from Cleveland himself down to Bynum and Bourke Cochran, as many renegades and humbugs disguised as priests. We speak for no political organization. Our chosen party is to take administrations as they come, and treat them by the standard of their public usefulness. Hence when we say that Mr. Bryan is blundering sadly we speak for no party or faction, but in the interest of truth and common sense.

Mr. Bryan expresses solicitude for the safety of Mr. Blackburn. But Mr.
Blackburn is in no danger except from his alliance with Mr. Goebel. He is the most popular man in the State, and no effort was necessary to secure indorsement of him for senator by the Democratic convention. Some of his friends are grieved at his present attitude, and are of the opinion that he is unwise to trust Mr. Goebel.

Silver is not the trouble there. The Democracy is divided over the manner of Mr. Goebel's nomination and over the election law which bears his name. His nomination, his opponents declare, was secured by force and fraud. Many of his supporters, even, do not dispute the charge. Mr. Waterson simply insists that Mr. Goebel played the same game in the convention that his rivals were trying to play, and was the "smarter" of the three. And as to the Goebel election law Mr. Watterson has declared:

"It is safe to say that the annals of free government will be sought in vain for anything approaching it in shameless bribery or unconcealed deformity. The records of reconstruction furnish nothing to compare with it.

The Brownlow despotism at Tennessee was considered tolerably reckless and tolerably thorough in its day, but the Brownlow despotism at its worst ventured not into anything so boldly, wholly bad as this."

So that in speaking of Mr. Goebel
Mr. Bryan must practically indorse both the manner of the former's nomination and the election law. Is he prepared to do that? He can not, we believe, give in his opinion in favor of either. The Goebel election, we believe, was secured by force and fraud. A natural easy way to kill tobacco using.
